Biographical and historical information The Dr. Lillian R. Goodman Nursing Department at Worcester State University was established in 1974. The program initially offered a baccalaureate degree program to registered nurses (RN) until 1986 when an undergraduate degree program was initiated. In 2001, the Master of Science Degree in Community Health Nursing was introduced and, in 2010, the Masters of Science in Nursing program began offering two concentrations: Community and Public Health Nursing, and Nursing Education. The program is named for Dr. Lillian R. Goodman (1923-2018) who was one of the program’s founders and its chair from 1973-1991.

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The collection documents several graduating classes from the nursing program and a small selection of materials related to the program and its related events.
